

Tim Wallers

Communication Coach

Tim is a highly experienced and popular communication coach, working with senior individuals and teams in the corporate sector. He has worked globally with major companies, including Coca-Cola and Schweppes.

Coming from a business background (his family worked in Lloyds of London for several generations), Tim understands the need to communicate as well as possible in all areas of business - from simple internal tasks within departments right through to larger seminars and public events.

He has been a successful actor for nearly three decades working in theatre, film and television. He can explain and demonstrate the core principles of holding and connecting with an audience when speaking in public with confidence, charisma and gravitas.

He encourages his clients to represent themselves in the best possible way they can in these often pressured situations so they speak with maximum impact and influence.